LEARN TECHNIQUES TO AVOID BULLYING

Bullying has become a significant social issue in schools, the workplace, and online. This relevant, practical course dealing with bullying issues explores bullying in a way that is understandable, practical, and honest.

The Bullying Issues Program defines the difference between bullying and conflict, the uses of Internet in cyber-bullying, and the many ways you can help diminish the issue and improve yourself to handle bullying situations. This course also provides a demonstration of what bullying looks like and what a person can do to help themselves or others who might be experiencing bullying.

With the Bullying Issues Program, you will gain important insight into the role of a bully, victim, and bystander and how you can become more engaged and equipped no matter what role you find yourself playing. Lastly, this course provides helpful “talking points” throughout the video that helps you follow along more closely and allow you to gain the important aspects of the course. By participating in this course, you will be given the tools to make a difference in how you handle bullying issues and handle those situations more appropriately.
